The human brain works very much in the same way as the human body's muscles which become duller and weaker when used infrequently. Basically, there are connections in our brains called synapses, which are formed when we go through a new experience. Child brain development studies have found that these connections get stronger when a child makes use of them. However, as a person gets older, activities and experiences are set aside. When that happens, connections get reduced activity. The lesser the activity in our neural pathways and connections, the weaker they become. That is why it is critical to do mental exercises to improve brain performance through brain training.
